

A short story, about me

Hello, I am Ana, and I believe in signs, intuition, communication, team, friendship, love... 🦋

I also believe that no matter what one does in life, it is not just one thing.

From time to time I used to put my life under analysis, and most of the results told me that I really needed to change something.

But what?

So, one day I was thinking about how I enjoy/ or do not enjoy my work as an architect. It took me a while to realize that I was enjoying working with my co-workers, not my work, that I was grateful for being able to help people, but not fighting with the bureaucracy, and also, I was enjoying sticking my nose in all sorts of thing to be solved around.

The pandemic came and somehow I started to reconnect with old friends. Some of them, workers in the programming field, were trying to catch my attention with ideas about their work. I gave it a try. I started playing with some Python for beginners, and read some about what programming was about. I haven't been that curious about something in a long time... I smiled and liked it 😊.

From then on I enjoyed learning the logic of programming and problem-solving. So far, the process was not easy, but challenging and enthusing.

I am only at the beginning of my journey to learn about this world. It feels like it's a huge, but beautiful universe here to discover and learn about.

You can see what I've done with my learning in the projects from the "my work" side of the "Sun" ☀️.
